ORDER

Before the court at this time is defendants' motion for reconsideration of this court's order of May 14, 1985 directing the defendants to submit a plan providing inmates with some form of assistance of counsel. Defendants have filed this motion pursuant to Rule 60(b), F.R.Civ.P. Although defendants do not cite which subsection of Rule 60(b) they wish to proceed under, it appears from the general tenor of their memorandum that they contend that the judgment should be reconsidered based on excusable neglect pursuant to Subsection 1 of that rule.¹ Defendants argue that the affidavits and other materials attached to their memorandum show that they were in compliance with their plan to provide inmates adequate law library facilities, but due to the failure of their attorney to collect and file these materials pursuant to the court's order of December 21, 1984, they were found not to have complied. They now seek an order reversing the court's prior decision and finding instead, that they have met their constitutional obligation to provide inmates with adequate access to the courts.

This motion will be denied. While the materials attached to defendants' motion do indicate that the state was making efforts to comply with its plan, they have failed to show that counsel's neglect in ignoring this court's order of December 21, 1984 was excusable. In the affidavits submitted by Attorney General Thornburg, by Assistant Attorney General Safron, who has been supervising the case over the last ten years, and by other employees of the Attorney General's office and the Department of Correction defendants give no reasons as to why Safron's failure to comply with the court's order was excusable.

With respect to his supervision over this case, Attorney General Thornburg states in his affidavit that "[a]lthough all of my staff attorneys are under my supervision, almost none of them are under my direct supervision, and obviously I am unable to supervise every case each of them handles in their representation of the State of North Carolina." This is certainly understandable, and the court has never assumed that the Attorney General or his predecessors in office would have personal knowledge of the innumerable orders which have issued in this case. The fact remains, however, that throughout the course of this litigation the state has failed to comply with a number of this court's orders. In their memorandum opposing defendants' motion, plaintiffs cite eleven other instances where defendants failed to respond to the court's orders. The state's failure to comply with the December, 1984 order was quite simply the straw that broke the camel's back and showed that the state has been unwilling or unable to comply with a plan submitted and approved more than ten years ago.

¹The motion may also be construed pursuant to Rule 60(b)(6) which permits reconsideration for "any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgement." At any rate, the same analysis would apply to either subsection.

To bring themselves within Rule 60(b), the defendants must make a showing of timeliness, a meritorious defense, a lack of unfair prejudice to the opposing party, and exceptional circumstances. Horner v. Carbo, 731 F.2d 204, 206-207 (4th Cir. 1984). Defendants' motion is timely, and they have presented quite a bit of evidence regarding their claim of a meritorious defense. However, assuming arguendo that reconsideration of the court's prior order would not result in unfair prejudice to the plaintiffs, defendants have totally failed to show exceptional circumstances in this case. Courts have consistently refused to relieve parties of the burdens of a final judgment due to mistakes or omissions of their attorneys, and the carelessness of an attorney is not generally cognizable under Rule 60(b)(1). United States v. Cirami, 535 F.2d 736, 739 (2d Cir. 1976); Cline v. Hoogland, 518 F.2d 776, 778 (8th Cir. 1975); Wood v. Kling, 98 F.R.D. 319 (E.D.Va. 1983).

Furthermore, as stated before, defendants' failure to respond to the December 21, 1984 order was not an isolated incident. Clearly, defendants knew or should have known that counsel had a history of failing to respond to the court's orders. Thus, the case cited by defendants in which the court ruled that an assistant attorney general's failure to represent the state's interest in federal proceedings constituted excusable neglect is factually distinguishable from this case. See Naples v. Maxwell, 368 F.2d 219 (6th Cir. 1966); cert. denied, 386 U.S. 971 (1967). Indeed, Department of Correction employees could have complained to the Attorney General at any time if they felt that Mr. Safron was not adequately supervising their case.

Accordingly, for the reasons set out herein, defendants' motion for reconsideration of the court's order of May 14, 1985 is denied. Defendants will have thirty days from the date of this order to submit their plan for providing inmates with the assistance of counsel in a constitutionally adequate manner.

SO ORDERED.

I, AARON J. JOHNSON, being first duly sworn, do hereby depose and say:

That I am employed as Secretary of the North Carolina Department of Correction. My office is located in Raleigh, North Carolina. In my role as Secretary, I am the Chief Executive Officer of the Department of Correction. I assumed my role as Secretary of Correction on January 5, 1985. Prior to this date, I was the pastor of the Mt. Sinai Baptist Church in Fayetteville, North Carolina. I was not employed by the Department of Correction prior to January 5, 1985.

When I became Secretary of Correction, I knew that Special Deputy Attorney General Jacob L. Safron had an excellent reputation. I understood that he had a history of competent representation of the Department in lawsuits brought against the Department. It was brought to my attention that he was the foremost authority on correctional law in this state. Therefore, I had no reason to question his work or his handling of this case.

In conclusion, I did not know or have a reason to believe that the court's orders in this case had not been responded to in a timely manner.

This the 9 day of August, 1985.

My Commission Expires:

9-25-88

That I am employed by the North Carolina Department of Correction as Executive Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of Correction. In this capacity, I serve as Chief Legal Advisor to the Secretary. I began working in this position on April 1, 1982. In my position, I and members of my staff have assisted Special Deputy Attorney General Jacob L. Safron in this case. The first assistance provided by me was the transmission of a voluminous amount of information needed to respond to a "Motion to Compel Compliance" prepared by counsel for the plaintiffs in this case. After this information was provided, members of the Division of Prisons staff appeared at a hearing on the Motion. According to my files, my first communication with Mr. Safron following the transmission of the information was a memorandum dated April 20, 1983, in which Mr. Safron informed me that the court had dismissed this lawsuit and that the plaintiffs had appealed. My next communication with Mr. Safron was when I received a memorandum from him dated February 9, 1984. In that memorandum, he informed me that he had appeared before the Fourth Circuit to argue the merits of plaintiffs' appeal in this case on February 7, 1984. He stated in the memorandum that the court had expressed concerns about the legal training provided to law libraries staff and inmate paralegals. I urged the Division of Prisons to assemble information regarding training. On or about August 16, 1984, I learned that the Fourth Circuit had vacated the order of the lower court and remanded this case for further proceedings. On that same date, I again informed those in charge of the law libraries to prepare for further hearings.

According to my files, I received no communication from Mr. Safron from August 16, 1984 until the order of this court dated December 21, 1984. The December 21, 1984 order required that the Department of Correction provide specific information regarding law library training, access to photocopying equipment, and access to law libraries for inmates. The order stated that this information must be provided within thirty days. When I received this order, I directed an attorney on my staff, Barbara A. Shaw, to work with Mr. Safron to develop the information requested. Sometime later, Ms. Shaw reported to me that she had developed the information but that when she contacted Mr. Safron, he delayed discussion of the matter. On one occasion, I called Mr. Safron and informed him that Ms. Shaw had prepared the information necessary to respond to the court's order. Mr. Safron informed me that he would let me or Ms. Shaw know when the material was needed. I heard nothing further from Mr. Safron regarding this matter until after I received this court's order of May 14, 1985. On or about May 14, 1985, Mr. Safron called me and told me that the court had mandated that the department devise a new plan for providing access to the courts which included providing legal counsel to inmates. He also told me at that time that he had failed to meet certain deadlines set by the court.

I read the order of December 21, 1984 in which the court indicated that Mr. Safron had failed to respond to certain motions. Further the Fourth Circuit opinion dated August 14, 1984 indicated that important evidence had not been included in the Record on Appeal. I had read those orders. Nevertheless, I thought that the Department of Correction was receiving adequate representation in these cases. I did ask Mr. Safron about the deficiencies pointed out in the court orders of August 14, 1984 and December 21, 1984. I knew however, that these deficiencies could be corrected. There was no reason to pursue the matter further.

Mr. Safron has an excellent reputation and had taught me a good deal of what I know about correctional law. I have known Mr. Safron for approximately eleven years. I consulted him regularly from September 1974 to September 1976 when I was drafting regulations for the Department of Correction. In 1976, Mr. Safron hired me to work for him as a staff attorney at the Attorney General's Office. I learned from his writing and from assisting him in the District Courts, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, and the United States Supreme Court. He was and still is considered the foremost authority on correctional law in this state. During the time from September 1976 until April 1982 when I worked for Mr. Safron in the Attorney General's Office, I observed that he worked long hours and that he did not leave work undone. I believed that he was doing his best for the department in this case, because he had always done excellent work for the department.

In my position as legal advisor to the Secretary of Correction, I have many responsibilities. I provide legal advice concerning all significant legal matters and recommended personnel actions. I also draft and review contracts and documents relevant to property transactions. I prepare legislation for the department and serve as the department's chief lobbyist for bills involving nonfiscal matters. I am responsible for development of legal training for the department and for the development of policies and procedures. My position is demanding, and I simply do not have time to look over Mr. Safron's shoulder to make sure he and his staff are carrying out their responsibilities. I have to depend on Mr. Safron, and I do depend on him, because he has always been reliable. I sincerely believed that Mr. Safron had provided adequate legal representation to the Department of Correction in this case until I received this court's order of May 14, 1985.

This the 9th day of August, 1985.

DEFENDANTS' RENEWED MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION (F.R.Civ.P., Rule 60(b)(6))

NOW COME the defendants, by Lacy H. Thornburg, Attorney General of the State of North Carolina, Andrew A. Vanore, Jr., Chief Deputy Attorney General, and Sylvia Thibaut, Associate Attorney General, who move the Court pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b)(6), to reconsider its Order entered May 14, 1985

directing the defendants to come forward with a plan providing attorney assistance to inmates, in light of the reversal of Hooks v. Wainwright, 536 F.Supp. 1330 (M.D.Fla. 1982), reversed, 775 F.2d 1433 (11th Cir. 1985), upon which the court based a great deal of its Order. This Motion is accompanied by a Memorandum of Law, which is incorporated by reference and to which the Court is respectfully referred.

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF RENEWED MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION
F.R.Civ.P., Rule 60(b)(6)

The defendants have moved the Court, pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b)(6), to reconsider its Order of May 14, 1985 to come forward with a plan to provide attorney assistance to inmate litigants in lieu of the present law library plan. This motion is made in light of the reversal, on appeal to the Eleventh Circuit, of Hooks v. Wainwright, supra. In the Hooks case, the District Court found that Florida's proposed plan to provide law libraries to its inmates rather than attorney assistance was inadequate, principally because of the high level of illiteracy (more than half) among the inmates housed in the Florida Prison System. Hooks v. Wainwright, 536 F.Supp. at 1337. The Florida District Court concluded that "meaningful access" to the courts could only be realized through a plan incorporating attorney assistance. Id. at 1349.

Reversing the District Court's interpretation of "meaningful access" as "too expansive," the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals held that the Supreme Court does not require mandatory provision of legal services to inmates. Id., 775 F.2d at _____. The Eleventh Circuit reiterated the Bounds requirement: "access to the courts may be provided in whatever manner the State desires." Id., citing Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. 817, 52 L.Ed. 2d 72, 97 S.Ct. 1491 (1977).

The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, although noting the "plight of prisoners and their difficulty in getting proper legal help," pointed out that their plight is no sadder than that of free indigent citizens.

But prisoners are not alone in that situation. Vast numbers of the unimprisoned, both convicted and unconvicted, can make a similar case for the need of legal counsel, but to date no constitutional obligation of the State to provide that help has been articulated. There is no indication that Bounds intended to take that giant step.

Id. at 537. See also Cepulonis v. Fair, 732 F.2d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 1984); Harrington v. Holshouser, 741 F.2d 66, 70 (4th Cir. 1984).

The Federal Courts in this Circuit have realized that not every action filed by an inmate needs the guiding hand of counsel, as illustrated by the not infrequent denial of requests for appointment of counsel made by inmate plaintiffs. See also Storseth v. Spellman, 654 F.2d 1349, 1353 (9th Cir. 1981). As was stated so succinctly by the Eleventh Circuit along this same line of reasoning,

If an individual prisoner is not constitutionally entitled to an attorney, even after filing a complaint in court, there is no rational basis upon which to decide that all prisoners are entitled to counsel for the purpose of considering, filing and pursuing similar claims.

Id. at 539.

The issue then is not whether writ writers, even with available library facilities, can represent inmates as effectively as lawyers. Surely they cannot. The issue is whether meaningful access has been provided to the North Carolina inmates through the court approved law library plan.¹ Meaningful access is provided if a prisoner is given a "reasonably ¹The Court can take judicial notice that all inmate lawsuits that have been filed in North Carolina concerning a denial of access to the courts since the inception of the case sub judice have been held to be meritless with the single exception of Ganey v. Edwards, No. 84-6156 (4th Cir. Apr. 2, 1985) (published), in which this court granted defendants' Motion Notwithstanding the Verdict subsequent to a jury verdict of denial of access. See footnote 8 of defendants' original Motion for Reconsideration for a listing of the majority of these cases.

adequate opportunity to present claimed violations of fundamental constitutional rights to the Court." Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. at 825, 52 L.Ed.2d at 81. If the cause of an inmate's inability to prepare a legally sophisticated court petition is not an affirmative prohibition by prison officials or the lack of access to materials due to incarceration, but due to the inmate's own deficiencies in education or legal knowledge, the State is not constitutionally required to pay for attorneys to ameliorate this deficiency. The District Court in Hooks attempted to decide the issue of meaningful access without allowing the State of Florida to demonstrate whether or not its proposed law library plan would provide meaningful access to its inmates. The Court in the case at bar, similarly, has decided the meaningful access issue without giving the defendants a chance to demonstrate that they are in compliance with their law library plan and that it does provide meaningful access to the courts for the North Carolina inmates. The issue, again, is meaningful access. That issue is being side-stepped by overlooking the defendants' documentation that they are in fact in compliance with their plan and are providing meaningful access to the North Carolina inmates.

In summary, the defendants pray that the Court will reconsider its previous position in light of the reversal of Hooks v. Wainwright. The defendants have placed on record documentation which demonstrates that they are in compliance with their court approved law library plan. It was through no fault of the defendants that their documentation was not given to the court in a timely manner. They fall squarely within the framework of the case of New York State Health Association, Inc. v. Carey, 76 F.R.D. 128 (S.D.N.Y. 1977).

Should the Court conclude, after reviewing the documentation provided to it by the defendants, that the defendants in fact are not in compliance with their chosen plan to provide prisoners access to the courts, then the Court could, of course, require that the defendants immediately comply with their plan. The defendants believe, however, that they are in compliance and stand ready to correct any failure to comply that the Court might foresee.

Although the defendants, through their Motion, respectfully request that this Court reconsider the drastic sanction ordered against them, they are, simultaneously with this Motion, submitting their plan for attorney assistance as ordered.

DEFENDANTS' RENEWED MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION (Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b)(6))

NOW COME the defendants, by Lacy H. Thornburg, Attorney General of the State of North Carolina, Andrew A. Vanore, Jr., Chief Deputy Attorney General, and Sylvia Thibaut, Assistant Attorney General, who move the Court, pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b)(6), to reconsider its Order entered May 14, 1985

directing the defendants to come forward with a plan providing attorney assistance to inmates. The defendants first assure the Court that they are proceeding in good faith to discuss a mutually agreeable plan with the plaintiffs. However, the defendants continue to believe that such a plan is not necessary in the case at bar for the reasons set out in the accompanying Memorandum of Law, which is incorporated by reference and to which the Court is respectfully referred.

This the 13th day of February, 1986.

This action is once again before the court on defendants' renewed motion for reconsideration of the court's order of May 14, 1985 directing defendants to provide some form of attorney assistance to North Carolina's inmates. Defendants requested leave to file this motion at a hearing held February 10, 1986 to discuss the parties' respective plans for providing inmates with attorney assistance. The court indicated that it would permit defendants to file their renewed motion, largely because it has raised concerns which the court feels may have not been fully addressed in prior orders.

As the parties well know, this action was not initially assigned to the undersigned. The finding that inmates are constitutionally entitled to either adequately equipped law libraries or the assistance of counsel had been made and affirmed by the Supreme Court before this court ever took jurisdiction over the case. See Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. 817 (1977). This court has always been troubled by this decision, for it effectively gives convicted criminals more access to the courts than most average citizens who have never committed a crime in their lives and who presumably are entitled to more rights than those criminals. Nevertheless, this court is bound by the Supreme Court's decision and is also bound to insure that defendants' obligation under that decision is carried out.

In support of their motion for reconsideration, defendants raise essentially two grounds. First, they assert that the court's May 14, 1985 decision is in contravention of the Supreme Court's holding that it is the state's right to choose whether it will provide inmates with law libraries or attorneys. Second, defendants assert that given the opportunity, the state could show that it has complied with its plan and has provided inmates with constitutionally adequate law libraries. These contentions will be addressed seriatim.

In the May 14 order, the court discussed extensively the opinion and order of United States District Judge Charles R. Scott in Hooks v. Wainwright, 536 F.Supp. 1330 (M.D.Fla. 1982). Hooks involved a civil rights action by Florida inmates challenging the adequacy of their access to the courts. As in this case, the litigation meandered through the courts for several years. After the Bounds decision came down, the defendants submitted a plan for providing inmates with law libraries. This plan was immediately attacked by plaintiffs, who by that time had obtained the assistance of Florida Institutional Legal Services, Inc. Although the parties attempted to compromise on the issue, their efforts failed, and they consequently requested Judge Scott to enter an appealable order regarding whether the assistance of attorneys, in some form, was an essential ingredient of Florida's attempt to comply with the mandate of Bounds v. Smith. For the reasons discussed on pages 14 through 17 of this court's May 14 opinion, Judge Scott found that it was. 536 F.Supp. at 1340-1352.

On appeal, the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Scott's decision, holding that "the district court erred in requiring that any Florida library plan, devised to ensure constitutional access to the courts by state inmates, must include a provision for attorney assistance." Hooks v. Wainwright, 775 F.2d 1433, 1438 (11th Cir. 1985) (emphasis in original). The court stated that under Bounds v. Smith, it was the state's decision whether to provide inmates with law libraries or attorneys. Defendants in this action now argue that based on this recent decision, this court's prior opinion requiring North Carolina to provide its inmates with some form of attorney assistance should be reversed.

However, for the following reasons, the court disagrees. In Hooks, the defendants were not given the opportunity to try their proposed plan. Judge Scott held that no law library plan would provide all Florida inmates with adequate access to the courts. Conversely, defendants in this case had their plan approved by a judge of this court more than ten years ago. It was their failure after all those years to properly implement that plan which forced this court to conclude that defendants would not or could not provide inmates adequate access to the courts through the use of law libraries. Although this court cited Judge Scott's opinion extensively in discussing the preferability of a plan which provides inmates with the assistance of counsel, the grounds for the court's decision was defendants' own failure to implement their plan. This issue was never reached in Hooks. Consequently, this court does not consider the Court of Appeals' decision to be dispositive.

Quite frankly, the undersigned is of the opinion that the May 14, 1985 order is in complete harmony with the Supreme Court's decision in Bounds v. Smith. The issue before the court in that case, stated in the first sentence of the opinion, was "whether States must protect the right of prisoners to access to the courts by providing them with law libraries or alternative sources of legal knowledge." 430 U.S. at 817. The Court held that the states did have such an obligation. The question of the adequacy of the state's law library plan was not before the Court, and the Court declined at that time to require states to include any "particular element" in their plans. 430 U.S. at 832. However, the Court did state that "[a]ny plan . . . must be evaluated as a whole to ascertain its compliance with constitutional standards." Id.

During the past ten years since the Supreme Court's opinion in Bounds v. Smith, this court has retained jurisdiction over the case to insure that the state met the obligations imposed upon it pursuant to its plan. However, since that time the Court of Appeals has twice held that defendants were not meeting that obligation. After defendants' final failure to respond to the mandate of the Fourth Circuit and to this court's orders, the court was forced to conclude that defendants could not assure inmates adequate access to the courts through its law library plan. The court finds nothing in the Supreme Court's opinion which would prohibit such a finding. Rather, the Supreme Court imposed an affirmative duty on the district courts to evaluate a state's plan to ascertain its compliance with constitutional standards.¹ This is exactly what this court did in the May 14, 1985 opinion, concluding that defendants' failure to properly implement their law library plan rendered that plan constitutionally inadequate and finding that under these circumstances, a plan providing some form of attorney assistance was the only way to assure that the mandate of Bounds v. Smith would be met.

In support of their second argument, defendants assert that, given the opportunity, they could show that at the time of the May 14 opinion, they were meeting their constitutional obligations, but due to the failure of Deputy Attorney General ¹Interestingly, two members of the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that this was precisely the issue before the court in Hooks v. Wainwright. In their dissent to the decision of the majority denying plaintiffs' petition for rehearing and rehearing en banc, see 781 F.2d at 1550-1551 (11th Cir. 1986), they argued that the issue before them was not whether, given that either law libraries or attorney assistance was constitutionally adequate, the court could require one or the other. Rather, they contended, the question that they were being asked to decide was whether, given that law libraries failed to provide meaningful access to a group of illiterate prisoners, the court could require the state to furnish assistance of counsel to that group.

Jacob Safron, the attorney formerly assigned to the case, to respond to the court's prior orders, they were not given the opportunity to show what efforts they had made.

In this latest motion, defendants do not appear to be arguing that the actions of Mr. Safron constituted excusable neglect. Indeed, at the February 10, 1986 hearing, the Chief Deputy Attorney General stated that former counsel's actions were "totally inexcusable." Instead, defendants appear to contend that counsel's actions were an isolated incident which neither the defendants nor counsel's supervisors could have anticipated. See Naples v. Maxwell, 368 F.2d 219 (6th Cir. 1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 971 (1967). Defendants also cite New York State Health Facilities Association, Inc. v. Carey, 76 F.R.D. 128 (S.D.N.Y. 1977), in which the district court set aside a default judgment in plaintiff's favor, holding that it would be unfair to the taxpayers of New York to be punished by the negligent actions of the state attorney general's office where they had little or no control over the attorneys involved in the case.

However, this case presents a different set of circumstances. Here, the actions of counsel which precipitated the May 14, 1985 order and opinion were not isolated incidents. As outlined in the court's July 29, 1985 order denying defendants' initial motion for reconsideration, the state had failed eleven other times over the course of this litigation to timely respond to this court's orders. As Judge Sprouse put it in Harrington v. Holshouser, 741 F.2d 66, 69 (4th Cir. 1984), "[a] description of the State's efforts . . . is a chronology of failure." Thus, the state's failure to comply with the court's orders cannot be laid solely at Mr. Safron's door.

Furthermore, while the taxpayers of North Carolina may ultimately be responsible for the funding of any new legal assistance plan, the actual defendants in this case are officials of the Department of Correction. Unlike the average citizen, they have been actively involved in this litigation and could have complained to Mr. Safron's superiors had they any concerns about his handling of the case. Thus, the court concludes that defendants must share the responsibility for counsel's failure to provide the court with sufficient information to determine the adequacy of the law library plan. That being the case, they have failed to set forth sufficient grounds to warrant reversal of the court's May 14, 1985 opinion and order. Accordingly, for the reasons set out herein, their motion for reconsideration of that order is denied.

SO ORDERED.

The Supreme Court having held in Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. 817 (1977), that the state must provide inmates with meaningful access to the courts by providing them with law libraries or alternative sources of legal knowledge, and this court having found that defendants have failed to implement their law library plan so as to afford inmates that access required, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed that defendants adopt a plan providing inmates with the assistance of counsel. Defendants are further directed to devise that plan in accordance with the directions set out in the order filed this date. However, implementation of that plan will be stayed pending appellate review of this decision.
